AIR BALLOON.

To the CITIZENS of PHILADELPHIA.

THE gentlemen, who communicated their proposals to the public a few weeks ago, for constructing and raising a large elegant Air Balloon, capable of raising great weights, and of carrying up men and other living animals into the regions of the atmosphere, and of returning them with safety to the earth, provided a sufficient sum of money should be subscribed to defray the expence, beg leave to declare that a liberality of spirit has been manifested to encourage the undertaking. Some occurrences, however, have happened, to give a temporary check to the proceeding. In particular, Mr. Carnes, a gentleman from Maryland, having advertised his intention to launch a Balloon into the air on Saturday last, the subscription was suspended till that exhibition should be over. As this was the private undertaking of an individual, who had been at a great charge to gratify the public curiosity, he was thought deserving of encouragement. Every appearance of interfering with this laudable and spirited undertaking of a stranger, intitled to respect, was, on that account, carefully avoided. It is to be sincerely regretted that an experiment so worthy of praise, was rendered incomplete by the accident of its taking fire and being consumed in the air. Its rapid ascent to a very considerable height, and its beautiful appearance when elevated, justly excited the admiration of every beholder. Unfortunately the means employed for carrying a person up with it, were inadequate to the purpose, and no ways calculated for safety, or to inspire confidence. Without intending to detract from Mr. Carnes's ability, whose talents for philosophy are considerable, it must be allowed, that the materials, of which his Balloon was constructed, were of too flimsy a texture, being made of silk that was no way strengthened with the addition of net-work, nor of any covering to make the attempt of carrying up a living person safe, as the event proved. Had Mr. Carnes been enabled by public support, to make it stronger, and of such a magnitude, as to compensate for the necessary weight that would be unavoidable in framing a proper car or gallery, to carry up one or more persons, without danger, the design would have been more complete, and the probable success would have increased the pleasure of the numerous spectators.

The undertakers of the Subscription-Balloon, which now, once more, bespeaks the countenance and support of the lovers of philosophy, and the curious investigators of nature, have no doubt but they shall have it in their power to guard against those defects and accidents, to which a private undertaking so great and important must be liable. As they intend to construct their aerostatic machine on a scale befitting the metropolis of one of the first states in the union, for wealth, commerce, literature and importance, they can entertain no apprehensions that they shall not meet with the countenance and support of the officers of government, who, as first in dignity and trust, ought to be foremost in improving every discovery which has a tendency to reflect credit upon the people over whom they preside. Regarding our fellow citizens as men of enterprise and lovers of useful science, who boast amongst them many distinguished for their genius and superior attainments in philosophy and literature, and amongst the mercantile gentlemen, persons of improved education and liberality of sentiment, we will not allow ourselves to distrust their being backward on this occasion to vie with the nations of Europe, in zeal to advance the interest of science. To do justice to the various classes of mechanics; their curiosity appears to be duly excited, and their earnest desire of seeing the design carried on successfully, is manifested upon this occasion.

The undertakers appeal to the good sense of all, after the proofs already exhibited to them both in Europe and America, to say, whether the practicability and utility of the scheme be not self-evident. The machine they propose to construct is every way much larger and more capable of succeeding than that from Maryland.—To remove every doubt on this head, we need only refer to a comparative table of the different dimensions of Air Balloons, and of the weights that are capable of raising, supposing the rarified air produced by flame to be according to the calculations made by Mons. Montgolfier, the first inventor of this discovery, as two to one, which experience shews to be founded on truth. Then a Balloon of 35 feet diameter, as was that of Mr. Carnes, was calculated to raise no more than 469 lb. weight; whereas one of 60 feet diameter is capable of raising, with equal ease, a weight of 3373 lb. Agreeable to this estimate, Mr. Carnes's Balloon, the furnace of which, it is said, weighed above 150 lb. was capable of raising from the ground a man weighing also 150 lb. more, but being clogged with a quantity of bed-tick, a great number of patches and other incumbrances, and having many holes, it performed that task with much difficulty. It is probable the furnace was charged with too much wood, and too intense a flame was thereby kindled. That circumstance, or the spilling of some coals by the casting over of the furnace in mounting above the wall of the Prison-Yard, against which the person to be raised struck and fell (as some alledge) were the probable causes of the Balloon taking fire and being consumed. In a Balloon constructed on so large a scale, and with the many precautions that will be taken in the one now proposed, these accidents, it is presumed, may be easily avoided.

One circumstance more deserves to be mentioned in this place. From careful enquiry and observation, the undertakers are now fully convinced, that for so large a Balloon as one of 60 feet diameter, stronger materials than silk will be required; they design to make use of fine but strong linen, with a proper covering to stop up the pores, to strengthen it, and to prevent the escape of the rarified air.—This amendment will be attended with another great advantage in reducing the expence of the whole more than one half.

Having laid these remarks before the public for the candid consideration of those who wish to promote the laudable design now to be taken in hand, and which has for its object one of the grandest, most beautiful and most useful discoveries this age has produced, nothing more is required to enable the undertakers to carry it into effect, than that persons in general should contribute such a moderate quota, as men often bestow, without difficulty or solicitation, in seeing a trifling play, or giving a dinner, to please the eye or gratify the appetite with a momentary satisfaction. Surely such an enjoyment, as cannot boast the refined pleasure which arises from a view of the before-hidden operations of Nature brought to light, and a contemplation of the wisdom and beneficence of the great Creator of the world to man, is not to be compared with the solid entertainment the proposed design will yield to a rational mind.

To remove the great difficulty of procuring subscriptions, where it is only asked at a distance, they now propose, with the assistance of some of the gentlemen amongst the holders of subscription lists, who cheerfully offer to make a personal application to such well-disposed persons as they can conveniently call upon, and thereby afford an opportunity to all who wish to encourage Philosophy and sound learning in the rising generation, to manifest the preference they give of the adorning the minds of youth with substantial information to the mere external decoration of dress or trivial amusements.

A. B. C.

Some gentlemen residing in other States, having contributed to the design, a list of the subscribers names will be published with the sums, in order that justice may be done to their liberality.

Since our last arrived the ship Alexander, Capt. Pinkerton, from Londonderry, by whom we have the following advices.

COPENHAGEN, April 17.

THE King of Denmark has been pleased to make a new arrangement in his Council of State in which the Prince Royal took his seat on the 14th. That Council now consists of his Royal Highness, with Prince Frederick, the King's brother, and the following members:—Count Thott, Mons. de Rosenantz, M. de Shack Rathlon, Count de Bernstorff, Gen. Huth, and M. de Stampe.

Paris, April 29. We have accounts from Dijon, that on the 25th, Mr. Morveau and the Abbe Chassier, went up in a gondola fixed to an air balloon, and in twenty minutes were out of sight; they were again seen in about an hour after they went up, but since that they have not been either seen, nor had any account of them arrived on the 30th, at the departure of the post. All Dijon are uneasy at the fate of these aerial travellers.

Maastricht, May 2. Yesterday a detachment of Austrian dragoons, headed by a Commissary from Brussels, appeared at Hertog Byck. After having levelled the barrier, and carried off the sign from the office of state, that detachment forbid the Receiver, in the name of his Imperial Majesty, to execute any order from the Regency of Heerle; and not to receive money from any person whatsoever for passing the barrier, threatening, in case of disobedience, to carry them away, bound hand and foot, to Hertogenroede. Three dragoons have been posted near that barrier, and the rest of the detachment are encamped in the neighbourhood of Valkenhausen.

LONDON, MAY 8.

A letter from Antwerp says, that merchants are flocking to reside in that city, and large ranges of warehouses are building, cranes putting up, and every thing getting ready for landing of goods, the Emperor having declared that within three months it shall be made a free port, and that he intends to have docks erected for building of ships, the harbour being convenient for carrying on an extensive trade.

Extract of a letter from Brussels, April 20.

On Wednesday morning, the 21st inst. three deputies from the States of Holland set out for Vienna to remonstrate with the Emperor on what appears to be his determined resolution of opening the Scheld; an event that will prove a death-blow to the commerce of Amsterdam, and give the Dutch no small cause to repent their ingratitude to the English nation during the last war. They may remonstrate, but his Imperial Majesty will complete his object.

According to letters from Berlin, that martial spirit which has so long distinguished the King of Prussia, has not yet left him, though in the 73d year. He has ordered four grand encampments for his diversion the ensuing summer; one in Pomerania, one in Silesia, one in Brandenburg, and one in the Duchy of Cleves. The Emperor goes to the North this summer, and is to have an interview with the Prussian Monarch.

It appears that the revolution so much talked of about the kingdom of Denmark, extends no further than a total reform in the councils of the nation, from which the Dowager Queen and her adherents have been excluded. This event has taken place on the Prince Royal, son of the late Queen Matilda, coming of age, as may be seen by the following extract of a letter received by yesterday's Dutch mail:

Extract of a letter from Altona, April 28.

His Danish Majesty has formed a new Council, under the auspices of his son, the Prince Royal, who accompanied by M. de Bulow, his Marshall, has visited the Members, and expressed to them the warmest testimonies of his regard. He has honoured the Comte Dethoff (whose great age precluded him from taking a share in the administration of public affairs) with the like marks of approbation. The people charmed with the condescending demeanour of the Prince, in whom the national hopes are reposed, seize every opportunity of manifesting this attachment to his person and family.

The last dispatches from Ireland represent the affairs of that kingdom to be in so desperate a state, that the Duke of Rutland had written to England requesting immediate letters of recall.

May 16. General Sir Guy Carlton is going out, with his suite, to the Viceroyship of British America, of which Quebec is declared the seat of government; the countries of Nova-Scotia and Canada, are to be divided into several provinces; the Honorable Henry Edward Fox and Thomas Mudge, are already named to command over two of them, one of which to reside at St. John's, and the other at Halifax. William Smith, Esquire, late Chief Justice of New-York, is named Secretary to the Vice-Roy, and will accompany his Excellency Sir Guy to Quebec.

A treaty has been some time negotiating between the Sovereigns of Great Britain and Spain, for the cession of Gibraltar, in exchange for the immensely valuable island of Porto-Rico, together with the provinces of East and West-Florida; and, it is added, that the losses of the loyalists are to be repaired by ample provisions for them in this large and profitable surrender of the Spanish Monarch.

This day at noon advice was received, that his Majesty's frigate the Crocodile, which was coming from Bombay with dispatches, was wrecked on Sunday morning off the Start. She left Bombay on the 14th of January, and St. Helena on the 20th March. The packet of letters with the crew were saved, and the dispatches brought to the East-India house. They contain an account that the English having received some affronts from the French, they immediately came to an engagement, when, after a great loss to the French, the English took Cannanore, with an immense quantity of treasure, the 20th of December last.

It is said the Parliament will have so much business to go through, that it cannot be completed before the latter end of August.

Dispatches were received on Wednesday night from Holland: Such is the state of the treaties that, Ambassadors to and from England and Holland are expected to be appointed in a few days, to reside in London and at the Hague.

Instructions are sent to the British commanders in the Mediterranean, to give the very earliest notice of the French or Spanish men of war passing the Gut of Gibraltar into the Atlantic Ocean, whether they appear to be bound for a distant quarter or not.

The following blunder in the true Irish style, we can assure our readers, is faithfully copied from the Dublin Evening Post of the 8th current:—

Dublin, May 8. By to-morrow's packet, which arrived this afternoon, it appears that Mr. Fox has a majority of 136.

Some material changes in the first departments of the state are expected to take place in a few days. It was asserted this morning that part of the new arrangements would be, appointing Lord Camden Privy Seal, and the Marquis of Carmarthen Ambassador to the Court of Versailles. The Earl of Shelburne's appointment remains problematical, though it is positively asserted that terms of a very flattering nature have been offered him.

May 17. At the final close of the poll at three o'clock this day, at Covent Garden, the numbers were,

For Lord Hood	—	6694
Mr. Fox	—	6234
Sir Cecil Wray	—	5998
Majority for Mr. Fox	—	236

After the numbers were declared, a requisition was delivered to the High Bailiff, as follows:

To Thomas Corbett, Esq. High Bailiff of the City and Liberty of Westminster.

I Sir Cecil Wray, Bart. one of the Candidates to serve in Parliament for the City and Liberty of Westminster, and we the undersigned Electors of the said City and Liberty, do hereby demand of you a scrutiny of the votes taken at the present election of two citizens to serve in Parliament for the said City and Liberty.

From the Hustings an adjournment was made to the Vestry, when after much altercation between the parties, the High Bailiff decided that no return should be made, and consented to the scrutiny taking place as desired.

Mr. Fox was chaired, preceded by about one hundred gentlemen on horseback, dressed in blue and buff, a band of music, and the marrow bones and cleavers, and followed by the Duchesses of Devonshire and Portland, in their carriages, who were attended by a number of gentlemen on horseback, and a great number of servants.

Lord Mahon and several other Members of Parliament have not signed it, because a petition will also be presented to Parliament, we hear, if that mode of proceeding should be deemed more eligible, and those gentlemen who have signed it, are prevented from being on the Committee.

The Independent Electors of Westminster are to support the majesty of the people—the majesty of the people to support the peace officers—the peace officers are to support the soldiers—the soldiers are to support the constitution—and the constitution supports the candidates—and the candidates are to support their consequence.

A letter from Lisbon says, that two American gentlemen are arrived there, in order to settle with that Court a treaty of amity and commerce, in which is to be one article, that for corn and flour, the Americans shall not be obliged to barter for the produce of that country, but shall be paid for their cargoes in cash, and that no corn vessel shall be stopped for having Portugal money on board; and as soon as this treaty is agreed to, the Americans will supply them with as much corn and flour as they can want. The same letter says, that several Portuguese families are going to reside at Philadelphia, during the summer season.

May 19. It was very publicly reported this morning in town, that the Definitive Treaty between England and Holland was signed at Paris, on Saturday evening last, by Mr. Hale, the British Plenipotentiary for the time being, and the two Dutch Ministers on the part of the United Provinces.

Extract of a letter from Frankfurt, April 23.

Politicians, whose fertile genius and warm imaginations delight in putting the universe in combustion, pretend that a storm is gathering at a distance, the explosion of which will, before long, spread desolation in more than one country of Europe. The equilibrium, so difficult to be preserved among the great powers, is, it is said, ready to be broken. The political world is in a moment of convulsion, that requires rapid and combined efforts on the part of the Potentates in maintaining the balance between their neighbours; whence it is foreseen, that the present tranquility will not be of any long duration. Without adopting altogether such melancholy ideas, we may venture to say, that they do not appear quite destitute of foundation; we know that several Princes of Germany are recruiting with much activity; and we moreover learn by a channel we may depend on, that the King of Prussia has ordered all the fortifications of the places in Silesia to be repaired immediately. To this we may also add, that there are immense orders for grain in Poland, given by the merchants of Dantzick and Elbing. If all this is not the result of a combination of some grand project, we must own, at least, that here is matter sufficient for the political speculation of idlers, who, from their fire-side, decide the fate of empires.

Yesterday morning, at half after nine o'clock, the Sheriffs of Middlesex met at Guildhall, Westminster, and the successful candidates, Mr. Wilkes, Mr. Mainwaring, and their counsel, scrutineers and friends likewise attended, when those gen-

Members were declared duly elected. The return was immediately signed by Lord Townshend, with between twenty and thirty other respectable freeholders, and the court was then dissolved. Not above forty freeholders attended this last stage of the business.

The instructions which the Empress of Russia has given to her Ambassador at the Court of Vienna, to take precedence of the other Ambassadors, has given rise to a serious altercation. The Marquis of Noailles has, in consequence of this order, absented himself from the Emperor's circle.

Things in Holland wear a very serious aspect, many people entertaining an apprehension that they shall be driven to New-Holland in the East, in consequence of the political arrangements, or other infringements which are going to take place in the old.

The people of Holland begin to be alarmed for the security of their money, as many think the country will be dismembered, and become a colony to some superior power; great anxieties and apprehensions prevail in the mercantile world there; and much distraction and division in their councils.

May 20. The Dutch mail of Monday furnishes us with the following account of the revolt which took place on board the Dutch East-India Ship the Java, Capt. Vice Admiral Jacob Cornelius Mattheus Radermacher, on its homeward passage.

It appears they had been obliged to take on board to work the ship, several Chinese and Javese sailors. Their voyage proved prosperous, till the 24th of December, 1783, when those foreigners rose up in arms whilst the Vice Admiral was at supper; their weapons were daggers and long Clasp-knives. The first that fell a victim to their inhuman rage was the man at the helm; and for six minutes they continued to massacre all they could come at. Of those that were in company with Mynheer Radermacher, none escaped unhurt, except the Chaplain, who found means to conceal himself under the table. After this most atrocious and more than savage butchery, the murderers flung their weapons over board, and quietly returned to their cabins; where being seated on trunks; they without the least resistance, suffered themselves to be chained down to the floor and where watched all night. The next day they where all (25 in number) tried, and sentenced to be knocked on the head.

His Majesty yesterday in going to the House of Lords, as well as in returning, was saluted with the general acclamations of the spectators. These evidently proved the popularity of the measure recommended by the present Ministers, in the dissolution of the last corrupt Parliament.

Yesterday his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales took the oath and his seat in the House of Peers before the King came to make his Speech from the Throne; the Prince came to the House escorted by a party of horse, which was dismissed on his arrival, and as soon as the ceremony of swearing was over the Prince returned in his private carriage to Carlton House.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

WEDNESDAY, May 19.

This day his Majesty being seated on the throne, delivered to both Houses of Parliament the following speech:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I have the greatest satisfaction in meeting you in Parliament at this time, after recurring, in so important a moment, to the sense of my people. I have a just and confident reliance, that you are animated with the same sentiments of loyalty, and the same attachment to our excellent constitution, which I have had the happiness to see so fully manifested in every part of the kingdom. The happy effects of such a disposition will, I doubt not, appear in the temper and wisdom of your deliberations, and in the dispatch of the important objects of public business which demand your attention. It will afford me peculiar pleasure to find that the exercise of power, entrusted to me by the constitution, has been productive of consequences so beneficial to my subjects, whose interests and welfare are always nearest my heart.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

I have ordered the estimates for the current year to be laid before you; and I trust to your zeal and affection to make such provisions for their farther supply, and for the application of the sums granted in the last Parliament, as may appear to be necessary.

I sincerely lament every addition to the burthens of my people; but they will, I am persuaded, feel the necessity, after a long and expensive war, of effectually providing for the maintenance of the national faith and our public credit, so essential to the power and prosperity of the state.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The alarming progress of frauds in the revenue, accompanied in so many instances with violence, will not fail on every account to excite your attention. I must, at the same time, recommend to your most serious consideration to frame such commercial regulations as may appear immediately necessary in the present moment. The affairs of the East-India Company form an object of deliberation deeply connected with the general interests of the country. While you feel a just anxiety to provide for the good government of our possessions in that part of the world, you will, I trust, never lose sight of the effect which any measure to be adopted for that purpose may have on our own constitution, and our dearest interests at home. You will find me always desirous to concur with you in such measures as may be of lasting benefit to my people: I have no wish, but to consult their prosperity, by a constant attention to every object of national concern, by a uniform adherence to the true principles of our free constitution, and by supporting and maintaining, in their just balance, the rights and privileges of every branch of the legislature.

This speech being afterwards read over, according to custom, first by the Lord Chancellor, and then by the Clerk of the House.

The Earl of Macclesfield expressed a lively sense of his Majesty's paternal goodness, in attending to, and providing for the various wants and exigencies of the nation. On each of the particulars contained in the speech, he touched in a brief but judicious manner, shewing its foundation in fact, and its importance to the prosperity and safety of the state. On that article which respected the appeal that had been made, by a dissolution of Parliament, to the sentiments of the people, he dwelt at the greatest length. The daring conduct of certain individuals in the last Parliament, had been reprobated by addresses to the throne, from every part of the country. His Majesty was encouraged and entreated therein to make an appeal to the sentiments of his people. That appeal, by a just, a constitutional, and a noble exercise of the prerogative, had been made. The result was, a greater unanimity concerning the most important national points, than had discovered itself in Parliament, or in the nation at large, for many years back. From this auspicious circumstance Lord Macclesfield prognosticated, that the exertions of the new Parliament would be productive of great good to this country. He moved, that an address, of which he read a copy, repeating and approving every sentiment, and promising support to every proposition in the speech from the throne, be presented to his Majesty. He added, in conclusion, that it would give him great satisfaction if it should pass unanimously.

Lord Falkland expressed his hearty concurrence with the sentiments expressed by Lord Macclesfield. His Majesty's present Ministers, he said, held the confidence of the people, and he hoped they would not disappoint it. He confirmed, illustrated, and applauded all the particulars in the speech from the throne, and concluded with repeating the alacrity with which he seconded the motion that had just been made to their Lordships.

The Earl of Fitzwilliam greatly applauded the attention and concern which the speech discovered to the distracted and dangerous state of the affairs of this country, and hoped that Committees appointed by Parliament, would contribute, and with effect, their endeavours to promote the gracious designs of his Majesty. But, after a few words on the principles that preserve a due equilibrium in the British Constitution, he entered his protest against that part of the address, which approved the late strong exercise of the prerogative in the dissolution of Parliament.

The House then went into a Committee to draw up an address of thanks; which being read and agreed to, and the Lords, with white staves, ordered to wait on his Majesty to know when he would be attended therewith, the House Adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

An address was moved for by Mr. Hamilton, in a long studied speech, full of panegyric on the virtues and abilities of Mr. Pitt, and the necessity there was for an appeal to the public by a dissolution of the last parliament. The address was, as usual, a direct echo of the speech itself.

Sir W. Moleworth, in a few words, expressed his approbation of the address which had been read, and was happy, he said, in the opportunity of seconding it.

The Earl of Surry said, he by no means wished to shew the least disloyalty, or a desire to commence hostilities at the first opening of a session; but there was a paragraph in the address which he could by no means agree to, as in his opinion it would preclude that House from entering at any future period into a fair discussion of the merits of the minister, in dissolving the late parliament at the period he did, and under all the various circumstances that attended it; the paragraph he alluded to was that which thanked his Majesty for dissolving the late parliament; for this reason he should move that the said paragraph be left out.

Col. North seconded the motion.

Mr. Macdonald (Solicitor-General) warmly insisted on the propriety of the paragraph remaining, and the necessity there was for a dissolution.

Mr. Powys strongly supported the amendment for leaving out the paragraph, as it could answer no good end, and was calculated only to irritate and cause dissention. He assured the House, that he had not the least objection to any other part of the address, and thought it would be for the honor of the minister if the paragraph was taken out, as it would then pass unanimously.

Lord North entered into a defence of the last parliament, and strongly condemned the paragraph in question, as it was hastily deciding a question with an intent to prevent any further discussion.

Mr. Fox, in a speech of full an hour, entered into a thorough justification of the conduct of the last parliament.

The present address, he said, if carried without a division, would be a means of making such members as disapproved of the late dissolution sign their own condemnation; therefore he hoped such members as were present would divide.

He particularly reminded the minister not to be too flushed with success, which to be sure was natural, as he had not been used to majorities; but desired him to recollect they were not certain of remaining; for as his new friends were acquired by arts and delusions, they were liable to desert him whenever they should recover their senses. He pointed out the necessity for unanimity, instead of hostility, which could only be acquired by striking out that exceptionable part; but if it was insisted upon and kept in, it was plain that unanimity was not meant. The hon. gentleman concluded with giving his assent to the amendment.

Mr. Pitt warmly contended for the propriety of the measure; defended his conduct in the late parliament; and was extremely smart on Mr. Fox, on account of his being returned for the most distant part of Scotland, which, he said, proved the humanity of the Scotch, who had taken pity on his forlorn case, and were determined to give him a seat, as at that time his seat for Westminster was doubtful. The right honorable gentlemen were smart and humorous throughout the whole of his speech.

The question was put, and at one o'clock in the morning the House divided, for the amendment.

The motion in its original shape was then put and carried, and a committee appointed to prepare the address.

Extract of a letter from Belfast.

"The passengers now going, and who have since the conclusion of the American war, sailed from this port in such prodigious numbers, are not the refuse of the country; they are not that class of wretched beings, who vegetate in the soil, and live the slave of every paltry landlord who gives them a Pig-stye, which he calls a Cabin, and exacts for the hovel an exorbitant rent out of 5d. per day, the wretched labourer's stipend—No, they are those that form the yeomanry of the land, the warm and comfortable farmer, who takes with him from 300l. to 700l. the industrious careful Linen weaver, who has scraped together a sufficiency to transport himself and family from this land of tyranny, famine, and folly, everlastingly doomed by her legislature to be the wretched victim of English cunning.

May 25. It is not on the ground of a mere surmise that Mr. Fox, is mentioned to be shortly a member of the present administration. It is certain, that he will be admitted to the exertion of his great abilities in the behalf of his country. Armed with such a tower of strength, the measures of Mr. Pitt, (that Mr. Pitt, whom Lord North, even when in opposition declared to be born a statesman) will receive double strength, to restore the empire to its former pitch of glory.

WAS left with the subscriber, at the Newtown-square tavern, in Chester county, by a carter who called himself John Spier, the beginning of last spring, two casks of GOODS, such as saddles, shoes and ironmongery. Said Spier informed he was bound to Fort-Pitt, and would call for the goods in a few weeks; but I am since informed that he has absconded, and as I am apprehensive that the goods were not his property, request the owner or owners to prove their property, pay the charges, and take them away.
July 20, 1784. JAMES ELLIOT.

CHARLESTON (South-Carolina) July 1.
Extract of a letter from Winnsborough, dated June 23, 1784.
On the eighth of May last, a most extraordinary shower or fall of hail, attended with thunder and lightning, fell in this District, and along the Banks of the Wateree; the hail stones, or rather pieces of ice, measured about nine inches in circumference; it killed several negroes, a great number of sheep, lambs, geese, and the feathered inhabitants of the woods without number; its greatest violence did not extend more than 2 miles in breadth, but where it began or ended is not known; within that space it stripped trees of their leaves and even their bark, and every blade of grass was beat to the ground. But what is still more astonishing, there are at this time many wagon loads of the hail-stones unmelted, lying in the hollows and gullies on the Wateree. The truth of the above facts can be testified by all the inhabitants of this place.

July 8. Last night this city was alarmed by the ringing of bells, beating of drums, and armed parties parading the streets; such indeed was the prevalent hubbub and confusion, that apprehensive persons could not but conceive that an universal conflagration had taken place: A correspondent however, informs us, "The whole of this bustle was in consequence of a riot made by the *****."

BOSTON, July 14.
The taste for air balloon matters has grown to such an extravagant pitch, that nothing can pretend to have any intrinsic value in it, unless it has this name as an appendage. The gentlemen and ladies upon the bon ton are not the only objects that can boast of this aerial bombastick insignia to their ornaments; as a countryman was heard to cry one day last week---"Fine ball on string beans."

NEW-YORK, July 22.
By the late accounts from Great-Britain we learn, that Mr. Oswald is gone as Commissioner to Paris, to settle a commercial treaty between that country and the United States of America. The following account of a strange phenomenon is related by a gentleman from Danbury, in the state of Connecticut; a child was born in that place seven weeks ago, with all the appearance of health; about a fortnight after its birth the head began to grow to an extraordinary size; and within the course of a few days it had extended from its proportionable bigness to 2 1/2 inches and one quarter in circumference, and continued to grow one quarter of an inch every day. The child continues to suck, and has all the visible signs of health.

We are informed that the late fire in Shelburne burnt only about six or seven houses; our last accounts from the eastward respecting it, proves premature.

MORRIS-TOWN (New-Jersey) July 21.
On Friday last, during the storm we had in different parts of this state, we hear the lightning struck the barn of Justice Freeman, at Woodbridge, and consumed the same. Mr. Freeman, who was at that instant entering the barn with a load of hay, was instantly killed.

A cow, the property of Mr. Pierson, about a mile and a half from hence, was killed the same day by lightning.

PHILADELPHIA, July 28.
Thursday morning arrived here the ship Alexander, Captain Pinkerton, from Londonderry, which she left the 1st of June. She brought upwards of 600 passengers all in perfect health.

Several other vessels from different parts of Ireland, with passengers, are daily expected here.

The parliament of Ireland met the 11th of May, and on the 14th was prorogued by the Lord Lieutenant, to meet the 29th of June following.

Their high mightinesses the States General have resolved, to make a present to the commander de Suffrein, vice-admiral of France, of a sword, mounted with gold and enriched with diamonds, in consideration of the services which that admiral has rendered to the Republic by the reprisal of divers possessions belonging to the States in the East-Indies, and the preservation of the principal establishments. The Dutch East-India company will also make a considerable present to that illustrious commander.

The last French packet, arrived at New-York, brought letters which intimated that the Marquis de la Fayette was to take his passage in the June packet, for America, and was to be accompanied by several of the French nobility, on a visit to the United States.

A Dublin paper of the 1st of May last, has the following article:
"Last week a large ship, supposed to be an American, struck upon the South-Rock, and drove in Cloughie-Bay, where she lies considerably damaged."

On the 20th inst. arrived the brig Favorite, Capt. Haystone, in 13 weeks from Liverpool; on his passage, the 19th ult. in lat. 39, 37, long. 59, he spoke with the ship Concord, Captain Gibbs, 11 days out from this port, bound to Bristol, all well.

Captain Fitts, in a schooner belonging to this port, is arrived at Antigua. Also arrived at the same island, Captain Gamble, of this port, from the Havana and Georgia.

Saturday last the brigantine Bloodhound, Captain Rowbottom, arrived here in eight weeks from London. Her advices are no later than those received by the late arrivals at New-York and this port.

By the above vessel we learn, that the ship Commerce, Captain Truxton, arrived at London about the 22d of May, from this port, after 30 days passage.

The John and Mary, Lownes, from St. Croix; Betsey, Mercer, and Prosperity, McKibbin, from Liverpool; Charles, Watkins, from Bristol; Freedom, Williams, from Guadaloupe; Lord How, McLane, from Jamaica; Buckleagh, Ritchie, from London; and Eagle, Ewart, from Madeira, are arrived at New-York.

Monday arrived here the snow Mary, Captain Ross, with 250 passengers from Londonderry, and ship Irish Volunteer, Captain Dillon, from Larne, with 500 passengers. The Bloodhound, from London, also brought 100 German passengers.

We are informed by authority, that the Judges of the Supreme Court purpose to hold Courts of Oyer and Terminer and General Goal Delivery, and Nisi Prius, at the village of Washington, for the county of Washington, on Monday, the 23d day of August next; at Hanna's-town, for the county of Westmoreland, on Tuesday, the 31st day of the same month; and at the town of Bedford, for the county of Bedford, on Tuesday, the 7th day of September next.

Tuesday the 20th inst. died in this city, after a severe fit of sickness, which he bore with christian fortitude, Mr. EDMUND CLUGG. His remains were the same evening interred in the Baptist Ground, attended by a respectable number of inhabitants. This gentleman, a few months ago, arrived in this city from England, on the laudable purpose of establishing the cotton and silk manufactories--after struggling with many and superior difficulties, he was just on the point of engaging in his favorite employ, when he was seized with that disorder, which put a period to his useful life. He was sensible and learned--as a companion affable, instructive and entertaining--in political sentiments a zealous whig, warmly attached to the liberties of America, and the rights of mankind--In religious-life, exemplary and ornamental, possessing the most sacred regard for the essential truths of the gospel--whereof he was an occasional preacher: such truths, as in his last moments, afforded him the brightest prospect beyond the grave, "The house appointed for all living."
